Mr. Amis began his private law practice in Oakland, California in 1971, returning to Dallas where he continued a civil litigation practice representing clients in most, if not all, the types of matters pending in our civil courts. He has mediated over 1,500 cases and has helped spread the good news of Dallas-style mediation to attorneys and courts in several states around the country.

Mike was a founding director of the Association of Attorney-Mediators, serving as President of that organization in 1991 and chair of its Seed Group Program which conducted trainings of experienced attorneys invited to be the first in their cities and states to bring the art of mediation to counsel and clients in their jurisdictions. He is a frequent speaker on mediation topics to local and state bar associations. He has been recognized three times as a "Texas Super Lawyer" and twice by Woodward and White as among the "Best Lawyers in America." Amis has conducted in-house trainings for Federal Reserve Bank, the FDIC, Chevron Corporation as well as the Texas College of Advanced Judicial Studies and a variety of law firms. In 1998, Mike received "The Brutsche Award" from the Association of Attorney-Mediators.
